

Beta testing is the testing of an application by real end users outside of a software testing lab. This controlled field testing aids in identifying the types of problems that real users will most typically encounter.