

An SLA, or Service Level Agreement, is a binding legal contract between a company and a customer for which it is providing a service. The SLA obligates the company to provide a minimal level of service. Breach of the SLA terms may result in penalties such as fines.